

"I am continually impressed by the wealth of talented people we have in Chelmsford and this performance demonstrated, once again, that the line between amateur and professional is a very thin one. The production was, in my opinion, as good as any I have seen in the West End or on Broadway. It would be wrong to single out individual performances as everybody on the stage gave 100 per cent and the supporting roles are every bit as important as the leads for a successful show. Indeed my praise cannot be restricted to the performers alone as the people behind the curtains also contribute to the success. The producers and directors, stage crew, lighting and sound all play their part. Someone famous once said "Entertainment is a gift. You give it to the world. On behalf of the audiences of Chelmsford I would like to thank you for that gift."
